

On Unconditional Love

From: Talk to Yourself, On Purpose

A Lecture on Self-Talk

By Paul Solomon

When your lover is the Source of all love, you will see this lover in all of life for that is His natural expression. And you will be able to see love even behind the facades that other people try to create to hide your lover. And under no conditions will you lose your lover neither in your own thoughts or in your relationship with others. Even the rocks and stones themselves will start to sing to you of your discovery. The love in your life is both intensely personal and absolutely transcendent.

When you are prepared to stop letting fear and death have power to animate your experience, then fear and death have no more power over you. You will know from that moment that you will never die. You don't have fear of what isn't. So it isn't even a matter of losing fear. It's a matter of knowing.

If you know love, you know life. This is not some romantic notion. It is an energy, a vitality, a living presence. And even those who vehemently deny that Love is alive, depend on it for the breath they draw. And if love and life were not of that nature, surely they would not draw another breath.

© 2007 The Paul Solomon Foundation