Question 2: Do we have the same people surrounding us in this lifetime as we did in previous lives?

Answer 2: Not altogether, but often, most always. Examine those people about and see if there is not a recognizable quality in those. For those that would seem familiar from the initial meeting, those that leave no wonder, that need no figuring out, as you might express. Then again, there are those that you would meet, who would seem having nothing in common or would not attract, and only over period of time would you begin to understand that personality and become familiar. These are indications of those with whom you have walked and had discourse in previous times.

Then as well, there are those brought, that may never have had contact in past, but rather represent, or have those characteristics of one having dealt with in the past, that need again be dealt with that the lesson might be learned.

Many of those, most of those, with whom you would walk in this time are familiar and have come together for purpose, for separating one another, and for assisting one another, for bringing those lessons that are needed. And well that you know that souls tend to incarnate in groups, for the reason that there is formed as well, group karma, in addition to that individual.
