

Relationships

Homosexuality

Paul Solomon Reading 0189. June 1973

Now understand as well that there are other attributes developed in the accepting of such a problem. For early within the life of the homosexual, there is the beginning of sympathy with other souls or the ability to empathize. And would you not look about you and see in those who have developed as the gifted psychic here or there that so often they would be of the homosexual? Would you understand then, one given with such a problem, if there not be the condemning of self, if there would not be the hating of those about for that which is the problem within the self, then there would be that opposite development or the empathy, the ability to empathize or to sympathize with others in their weakness.

Then the one would be able to look with concern on the heart of another and not so often to condemn. Or that is, there is built the great ability to love within the heart of the homosexual. Yet would this ability to love not be channeled in selfish ways? Become aware then if there be giving in constantly of the self, giving in to those temptations that come or those opportunities to indulge in that which would be the satisfying of the physical body. Then understand that of the physical, and bring it into subjection and use those energies, those special energies that are given.

Now consider these then opportunity, as gift. And if you could channel in such ways as would be constructive, would be healing, then do so. And if there be the giving of self to another, then understand that which he has given. That you would be faithful, and giving of self in love, and giving in those activities in such a way to help rather than to use another individual. The giving of self in love is always right and productive. The taking from another for the satisfaction of the selfish desires within sex is always wrong, regardless of polarity within the physical body, for the soul has no sex, has no polarity here or there, one way or the other. There is no homosexuality on these planes. Then this one is not homosexual, but rather is an androgynous soul captured in the male body and given to these purposes for the development, not for the condemnation.

Question: How might I best utilize the information on homosexuality from this Source to help other homosexuals understand themselves better?

Answer: Now there is the much activity that would be given concerning those various ones that would come seeking in these ways, for there are the various manners in which these are developed. Some for the rebellion; some for the condemnation of self; some in karmic conditions; and some because of the genes, or the glands or the imbalance, the hormonal imbalance within the bodies.

These are not all given then to the same problems. Then that which you would seek to do would be the research within that which is given here concerning that from these sources. And encourage those that they would give of self into service of others. Not given to promiscuousness, or the giving of self to the satisfaction of self, but encourage these to realize that they are given souls for productive purpose, for serving the Master. And energies here, special talents, are often given as well. These so often develop in the arts, or channel energies in such greater ways because there is never the fulfillment in giving the self to one of opposite polarity in the physical. There is never the completion, as has been described, or the setting aside by society so that these energies are channeled often in more productive purposes.

Then study that which can be developed, and yet limit no man to that which is truth within thyself. Or that is, you could not say to all homosexuals, "This is true of you." Or, "In this manner you should react." For some have come into this lifetime choosing homosexuality as a reminder that they should be celibate, or that they would develop those abilities to overcome the flesh in this time. Others are given karmically so that they may be forced to react to those conditions that they have condemned in another. Others are given that they may develop those talents for the arts and might be able to bring that energy within the self. Rather than marrying, that there would be the containing of creative energy within the self to be channeled for the arts. There are the others then who have chosen to contain within the self the sex for purposes of being the healer, in sharing in these ways. Now if these are the purposes, then these ones often would be celibate.

There are those who would give of self for the satisfaction of others in love, and the forming of those partnerships that would be the ushering in of these new times when there is the lack of polarity in the flesh. Or the developing of the androgynous bodies as well as the androgynous souls, in those who have come together with the soul mates. Yet these more often would be known as the bisexual and should manifest in those ways that are acceptable in producing the family or in fulfilling the self. Then study that which is given and grow.