

The Voice of the Planet

Paul Solomon Reading 9200 – L – 9156-FA-DS-0001-Hitachi, Japan, March 17, 1988

Become involved in the movement just being born to encourage the people of the earth to reforest this planet, for it is such an essential step, a key, to the survival, not only of the species of man and beast, but to the life of the living earth itself.

You even can communicate with the Mother, for it is she who speaks through us as we speak of these things to you. You have heard the voice of the Mother as channeled through this communication. For in these last few times of communication with the Records, it has been allowed that the planet herself be able to express her difficulty in these days, and it is she who at once speaks of a feeling that she has, of pain, and her sense that there is about to be a major eruption in her surface, her body, her skin. It is she who again speaks with a voice of hope when we communicate again in a consecutive time and says to those who hear her voice, "Listen. Listen to the voice of the planet who gave you life and breath."

And listen to her cry, for she has come to a point where she says to you, "I would give my very life to support you, but if I did lose my life it would not support you, for my life is essential for your support. Then, you must begin acting in ways, and living in ways that are supportive to my life, the life of the earth, lest as you sacrificed the Life that gave life to the earth on this planet, that you should again crucify the very earth itself. A time of redemption, or of destruction is at hand. Hear these words....those who have ears to hear."

© 2007 The Paul Solomon Foundation